Work Ethics

TrenholmState adopted the Work Ethics Program to expose its students to current practices in work ethics. The program supplements a strong Community and business curriculum to assist in placing TrenholmState graduates among the model employees sought by local, national, and global businesses and other organizations.

The Work Ethics Program addresses ten key areas: attendance, character, teamwork, appearance, attitude, productivity, organization, communication, cooperation, and respect. Students complete various modules and workshops that help demonstrate the behaviors sought. Also, each focus area is presented to students on both campuses through electronic messages, media screen reminders, and freshman class sessions where students engage in exercises and discussions.

TrenholmState adopted this Program from the Georgia Department of Community and Adult Education, but tailored it to fit its own culture and environment. To ensure a thorough assessment of the program outcomes, an inter-departmental team has been assigned to work with the Work Ethics Program to evaluate the target goals, critical success factors, total involvement, and continuous improvement mechanisms.
